

HOW TO BE A REVIEWER OF CONTEMPORARY DIALOGUE?

Reviewers play an essential part in science and in scholarly publishing. Scientists and scholars have relied upon peer review to validate research, engage other specialists in the support of submitted work, and increase networking possibilities within specific specialist communities.

Although in recent years the peer review process has attracted some criticism, it remains the only widely accepted method for research validation and a cornerstone of the scientific publishing process. Contemporary Dialogue relies on effective peer review processes to uphold not only the quality and validity of individual articles, but also the overall integrity of the journal.

The Contemporary Dialogue (CD), a quarterly journal, invites scholars, researchers, and academics to join our team as reviewers. This is a voluntary opportunity to contribute your expertise and play a vital role in ensuring the publication of high-quality research in the field of social sciences.

Requirements:

- Expertise in any field of social sciences and education
- Prior experience in academic publishing or peer reviewing (preferred)
- A commitment to providing timely and constructive feedback

If you are interested in becoming a reviewer, please fill out the form linked below and submit/email your latest CV to the editor. The Editorial Board will review your submission and provide you with an update.